

is the Amount of the Cotton Crop.
It is always an interesting inquiry, and of less importance than the price, as the quantity and the price are regarded convertible terms, or, in other words, one is invariably dependent on the other. Cotton planters hold local and general conventions, may form companies with large capital, divide means to control the market; may hold back the cotton at one season, and bring it forward at another, in accordance with the directions of a wise agent, but the attempt will fall far short of securing the object, and the whole experiment will wind up ingloriously the second, or possible the third year. The same may prove an advantage to a few, but not to the planter, nor to the credit of any. At best, it would turn out, if I may say so, a speculation.
The old theory will hold good, modified only in a slight degree by circumstances. Supply and demand, with associations or without them, will always regulate the price, and the only remedy planters have for low prices is to diversify their pursuits, and give labor and capital another direction than that of cotton culture.
The impression is very general in this quarter that the crop of 1851 will be found to be very large. There is, however, as usual, a difference of opinion on this point. A planter high in authority, says to me, "as to the crop of 1851, I have, since the first of September, traveled not less than 500 miles, most of it on different routes, seeing at least 400 miles of this state and Eastern Louisiana, and by inquiry I have informed myself as well as possible, and I do not think there is one bale to the hand more than last year, or, in other words, Mississippi will send toward about 100,000 bales more than last year. I am fully aware that much of our country has exceeded the above, yet other parts have fallen short.
The storm in November cut off a vast deal of land. I lost one twelfth of what I made. The crop can be generally better than has been supposed."
If the above opinion, as to the amount of the crop, is to add to my own, formed from conversation with gentlemen from different parts of Alabama and Mississippi, assembled at Montgomery, Mobile, New Orleans, and Jackson, I should express the conviction that, if there is any error in the above estimate, it is in placing the figures too low. Should the crop, when in, not turn out large, I shall not regret it. On the bayous and rivers of western Mississippi, the crop is as fully in market as is usual, but all the region accommodated by the Tombigbee, which embraces western Alabama, upper and eastern Mississippi—a fine country—the cotton is yet at home. The river has not been, nor is it yet navigable, and of course it is impracticable to ship the produce of this region. After the fall of the rains here, the receipts to the Gulf ports may be expected to be greatly swollen. A considerable alarm has been felt by planters lest they might not get in this crop at all. This is certainly a potent argument for making rail roads among us. Yours, truly, JACKSON.

Messrs. Editors—The exquisite beauty of the gem I will, I am sure, secure it for a more prominent place than the poets "barrel." It is from a rich treasury of pure and lofty thought, and its touching simplicity mirrors the sweetness and tenderness of the young mother's heart.
JUNIOR.
My Children.
I have two little darlings,
With eyes of deepest blue,
There's just a year between them,
And the younger is not two.
I watch their mind expanding
With fond and earnest hope,
Like fragrant little blossoms
Whose petals daily open.
Frank says he's mother's rose bud,
And little brother Willy,
With skin like alabaster,
Is my budding water lily.
I call them both my mock-birds,
For like music to my ear,
Are their merry little voices,
So silvery and clear.
What dew is to the flowers,
The rainbow to the sky,
Are these children to my pathway,
Which they cheer and beautify.
They fill my heart with gladness,
With thankfulness and praise,
They chase away my sadness,
And leave no gloomy days.
Though many other blessings
Around my footsteps fall,
My children and their father
Are chief among them all.
My life seems crowned with joys
Whenever I look on them,
And they the brightest jewels
Within the diadem.
Then blessings on my darlings,
Bright blessings from above,
God grant their tender boyhood
Mise not another's love.
Oh may my days be lengthened
Throughout their early youth,
To lead them in the pathway
Of Honor and of Truth.
God grant to me His spirit,
To guide their souls aright,
To teach them by example,
To walk "as in His sight."
And when this life is ended,
May all whom He has given
United, form a family
Within the courts of heaven.

TELEGRAPH BETWEEN IRELAND AND ENGLAND.—The Dublin Evening Post says that there is no doubt that Ireland will in May next not only possess the same advantages of internal electric communication as England and Scotland, but also be enabled to communicate directly with all the principal towns in these kingdoms. Charles West, the engineer of the Irish Submarine Telegraph Company, has been in Dublin for some days.
What they say of Us.
LANCASTER LEDGER.—We owe to our brother Editor R. S. Bailey, of the Lancaster Ledger, an apology, for having neglected to notice at the proper time, the very ably edited paper, which he has established at Lancaster C. H. We hope he will excuse us for our remissness.
The Ledger is well printed, ably edited, and should be a source of pride to the intelligent District in which it is established. It is independent in politics, the editor reserving to himself the privilege of advocating whatever policy he may deem advantageous to the public interest.
Our best wishes for his success to the proprietor of the Ledger.—Black River Watchman.
NEW PAPER.—We have heretofore neglected to notice the appearance of the "Lancaster Ledger"—a newspaper just commenced in Lancasterville, S. C. It is published weekly at $2 in advance, by R. S. Bailey, who is also the Editor. The "Ledger" presents a fair appearance and its editorials are well written and contain sensible views on the condition of affairs in the lead of affairs in the land of chivalry. We wish the Editor success.—Concord Mercury.
STUDIES OF LIFE.—Read not books alone, but also read itself. If you find anything questionable there, use the commentary of a severe friend, rather than the gloss of a sweet flattered. There is more profit in a distasteful truth than in deceitful sweetness.
In England an editorial notice of half a dozen lines is charged at the rate of about twenty times the price of the advertisement to which it refers.—Here it is demanded as something to be thrown into the bargain.—
At a recent down East, after an order was given to "return rascals," one of the soldiers broke from the line and was off at full split. Hollow-w, followed out the commanding officer, where you are going to at such a rate.
Days to Squire Muggins to return the ramrod I borrowed from him.
SINGULAR SALE OF SLAVES.—A negro woman and several children were sold at Goldsboro', N. C., a few days ago, at price ranging from $711 to $827. The Goldsboro' Patriot says:
"They were the children of a free negro by the name of Adam Wanne, who had purchased their mother, his wife, previous to their birth. They were consequently his slaves, and he having become involved, they were sold for his debts."
IMPORTANT IF TRUE.—The New York express states that letters from Paris had been received in that city by the Arctic, which says that the British government has officially informed the French government that the moment a French soldier is sent across the Belgian territory, the city of Antwerp and the forts on the Scheldt, will be occupied with an English army of ten thousand men.
MEDICAL COLLEGE OF SOUTH CAROLINA.—The Annual Commencement of this institution took place last evening at St. Andrew's Hall and was attended by a large audience, which was highly interested by the proceedings. The exercises of the evening were opened by a prayer from the Rev. Whiteford Smith. The report was read by Professor Price, who represented the College as in a highly prosperous condition, 131 students being in attendance; this session, and 103 having received degrees. Dr. Geddings followed in an able Address. There were two competitors for the best thesis, which after much hesitancy, their merits being so nearly equal, was awarded to Mr. T. C. Thomas, subject, Cod Liver Oil, his competitors Mr. Julius J. Porcher, subject, the Encephalon, received very favorable mention. The Hon. Mitchell King delivered the Valedictory, as President of the Board of Trustees.
